

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system and method are provided in which relevant byte codes that are frequently used upon execution of a Java program are compiled to corresponding native codes and the resultant native codes are stored so that the native codes for the relevant byte codes are retrieved and executed upon future execution of the Java program, thereby shortening the time required for generating the native codes by compiling the byte codes.